CLASS OF 1984

It is my pleasure to greet the Class of 1984 and to include this message in La Letra.

You have become an important part of the University of Redlands, and those of us who remain on campus will miss you. Each class makes a major contribution — and each leaves a gap behind it. New classes, fortunately, keep coming along. Nonetheless, there is always a feeling of nostalgia for special individuals in each class and for distinctive contributions made by many of you.

Please know that my sincerest best wishes and congratulations go with you as you leave the campus.

Whether students or alumni and alumnae, you are very important to those of us who continue to maintain the University on your behalf.

I look forward to many more years of significant sharing with you.

Sincerely,

Douglas R. Moore
President

I wasn't overly impressed with this place when I arrived.

My attitude has always been something like "dive in head first and hope you don't hit bottom." With that frame of mind, I came to the University carrying all my worldly possessions (well, my stereo, some T-shirts and Levi's) in the backseat of my humble VW having never seen the campus. To make matters worse, I had forgotten to fill out my Housing Preference Card over the summer, so I was assigned to a dorm called North — something in the corner of the campus just about as far from everywhere as you can get.

I was mighty impressed with the ivy-covered buildings — their pillars and stonework told me I had made it to the right place, that I hadn't made a wrong turn back in Temecula or somewhere. But the ivy-league look faded fast when I made my way to my block-walled cell. Four white walls, one window, one door, two bare beds, a sink and some crazy red haired cellmate who wore sandals and surf trunks a lot comprised what I figured to be one very short college career.

I wasn't overly impressed with the housing arrangement either; no girls for as far as the naked eye could see (they had been instructed not to visit that place), three men to the shower (don't drop the soap), and a little guy just below my bare floor that kept strange hours and practiced playing the flute very early in the morning. A little barbed wire and a rifle-laden sentry or two would have made the place complete.

But things got better. Red found some scroungy-looking orange carpet that had been tossed the semester before that added some color to the floor. We bought some National Geographic magazines, tore out some native photos and stuck them to the wall with Chapstick. Every so often we'd catch a glimpse of some brave female that would wander near the dorm parking lot. The guy downstairs turned out to be fairly friendly and gave up the flute for a Ouija board. I actually began to have fun.

The third day rolled around and classes began. But still I had fun. I met a few more people (even a couple of girls), went to a handful of parties, drank a beer, played some ping-pong. Life became quite an adventure.

Then things really got wild. Mid-terms, desk sitting, a few more social functions, long nights with minimal responsibilities (I'll be fine as long as I can get out of bed by Monday), more ping-pong.

My sparse abode took on the personality of a warm and loving home, always waiting patiently for its master to return. Semesters drifted together, classes came and went, but the summer-camp atmosphere remained. I was Camper Jon, away from the comforts of home for an endless summer at Camp Redlands.

But the units, those awful rungs on the collegiate ladder, quietly gathered day by day. The blurred weeks of academic endeavor sped past with all the finesse of a locomotive. Summers came and went, short time-outs designed to infect a sense of the "other world."

The old bare-floored room was exchanged for others, none with quite the character of the original cell. Broken-down furniture, the scroungy orange carpet and the colorful National Geographic pictures followed me as I made my way through the scholastic battlefield; reminders of my rustic beginnings.

I awoke one morning a few months back and as I lay in my warm bed (where I do my best thinking) I pondered my academic situation: four years of college at an average of 15 units per semester, plus Interims. With the aid of a two-year-old calculator that I located in an unopened carton, I computed my destiny.

It was then I realized that there was no way out. The University had prepared me. The "other world" awaited. The conspiracy had succeeded. Camp Redlands was about to award the Eagle Scout pin to another camper.

I've come to accept my future. I've given up the schemes to avoid the confrontation, to hold on for one more camp-out. Others before me have accepted their fate. I can too.

I considered myself brave for diving into college life head-first. The waters ran deeper than I anticipated, a little murky at first, but sufficient to sustain life. Splashing around has been great fun since first my little toes were wetted.

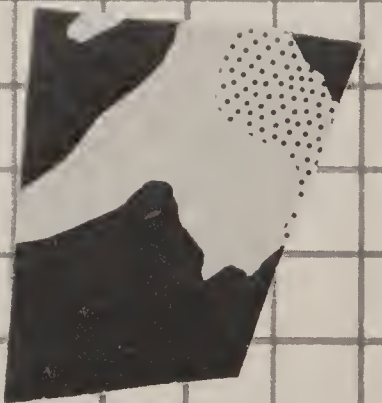

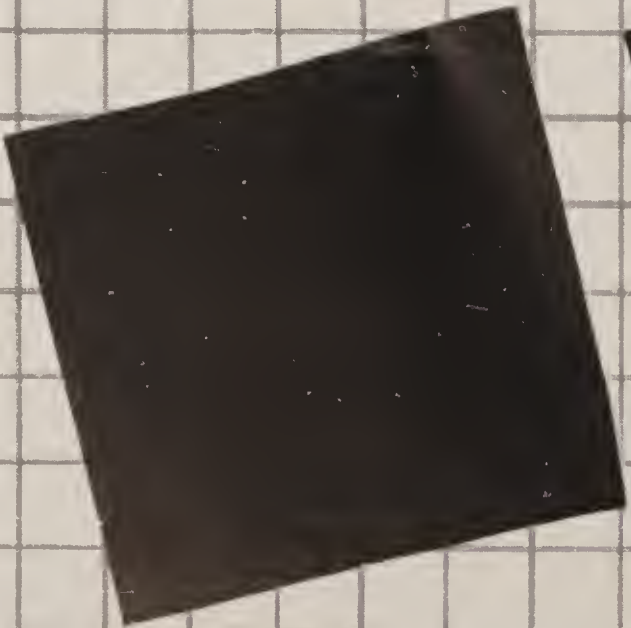

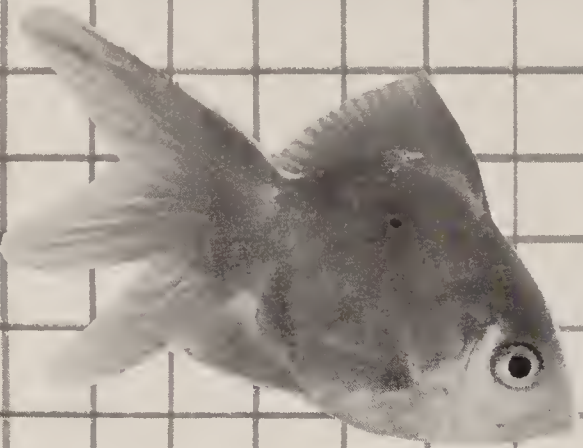

And to think I wasn't overly impressed with this place.

La Letra staff needs support, not threats

We applaud the fiscal caution of ASUR president Jeff Wagner in asking the La Letra yearbook to sell at least 500 books or face having the publication cancelled. However, we think the ultimatum was unfair to dedicated co-editors Tammy Knopp and Ken Caudillo.

Like most institutions in this school, the yearbook is being run by a few dedicated individuals. And, not unlike publications in past years on this campus, its budget is being carefully guarded because of mistakes made by earlier editors, not by those currently in the position.

Knopp and Caudillo have a tougher task in the La Letra editorship. They are new to the school, which makes some of the editorial tasks difficult (contacts, coverage, etc.), and they alone comprise a large part of a very small staff.

Both have had extensive publication experience and, we are assured, are qualified to produce a quality publication — let them go to it.

Wagner's caution is natural — no ASUR president wants to have a debt. We approve that. His threats to stop the yearbook from being published, however, are empty.

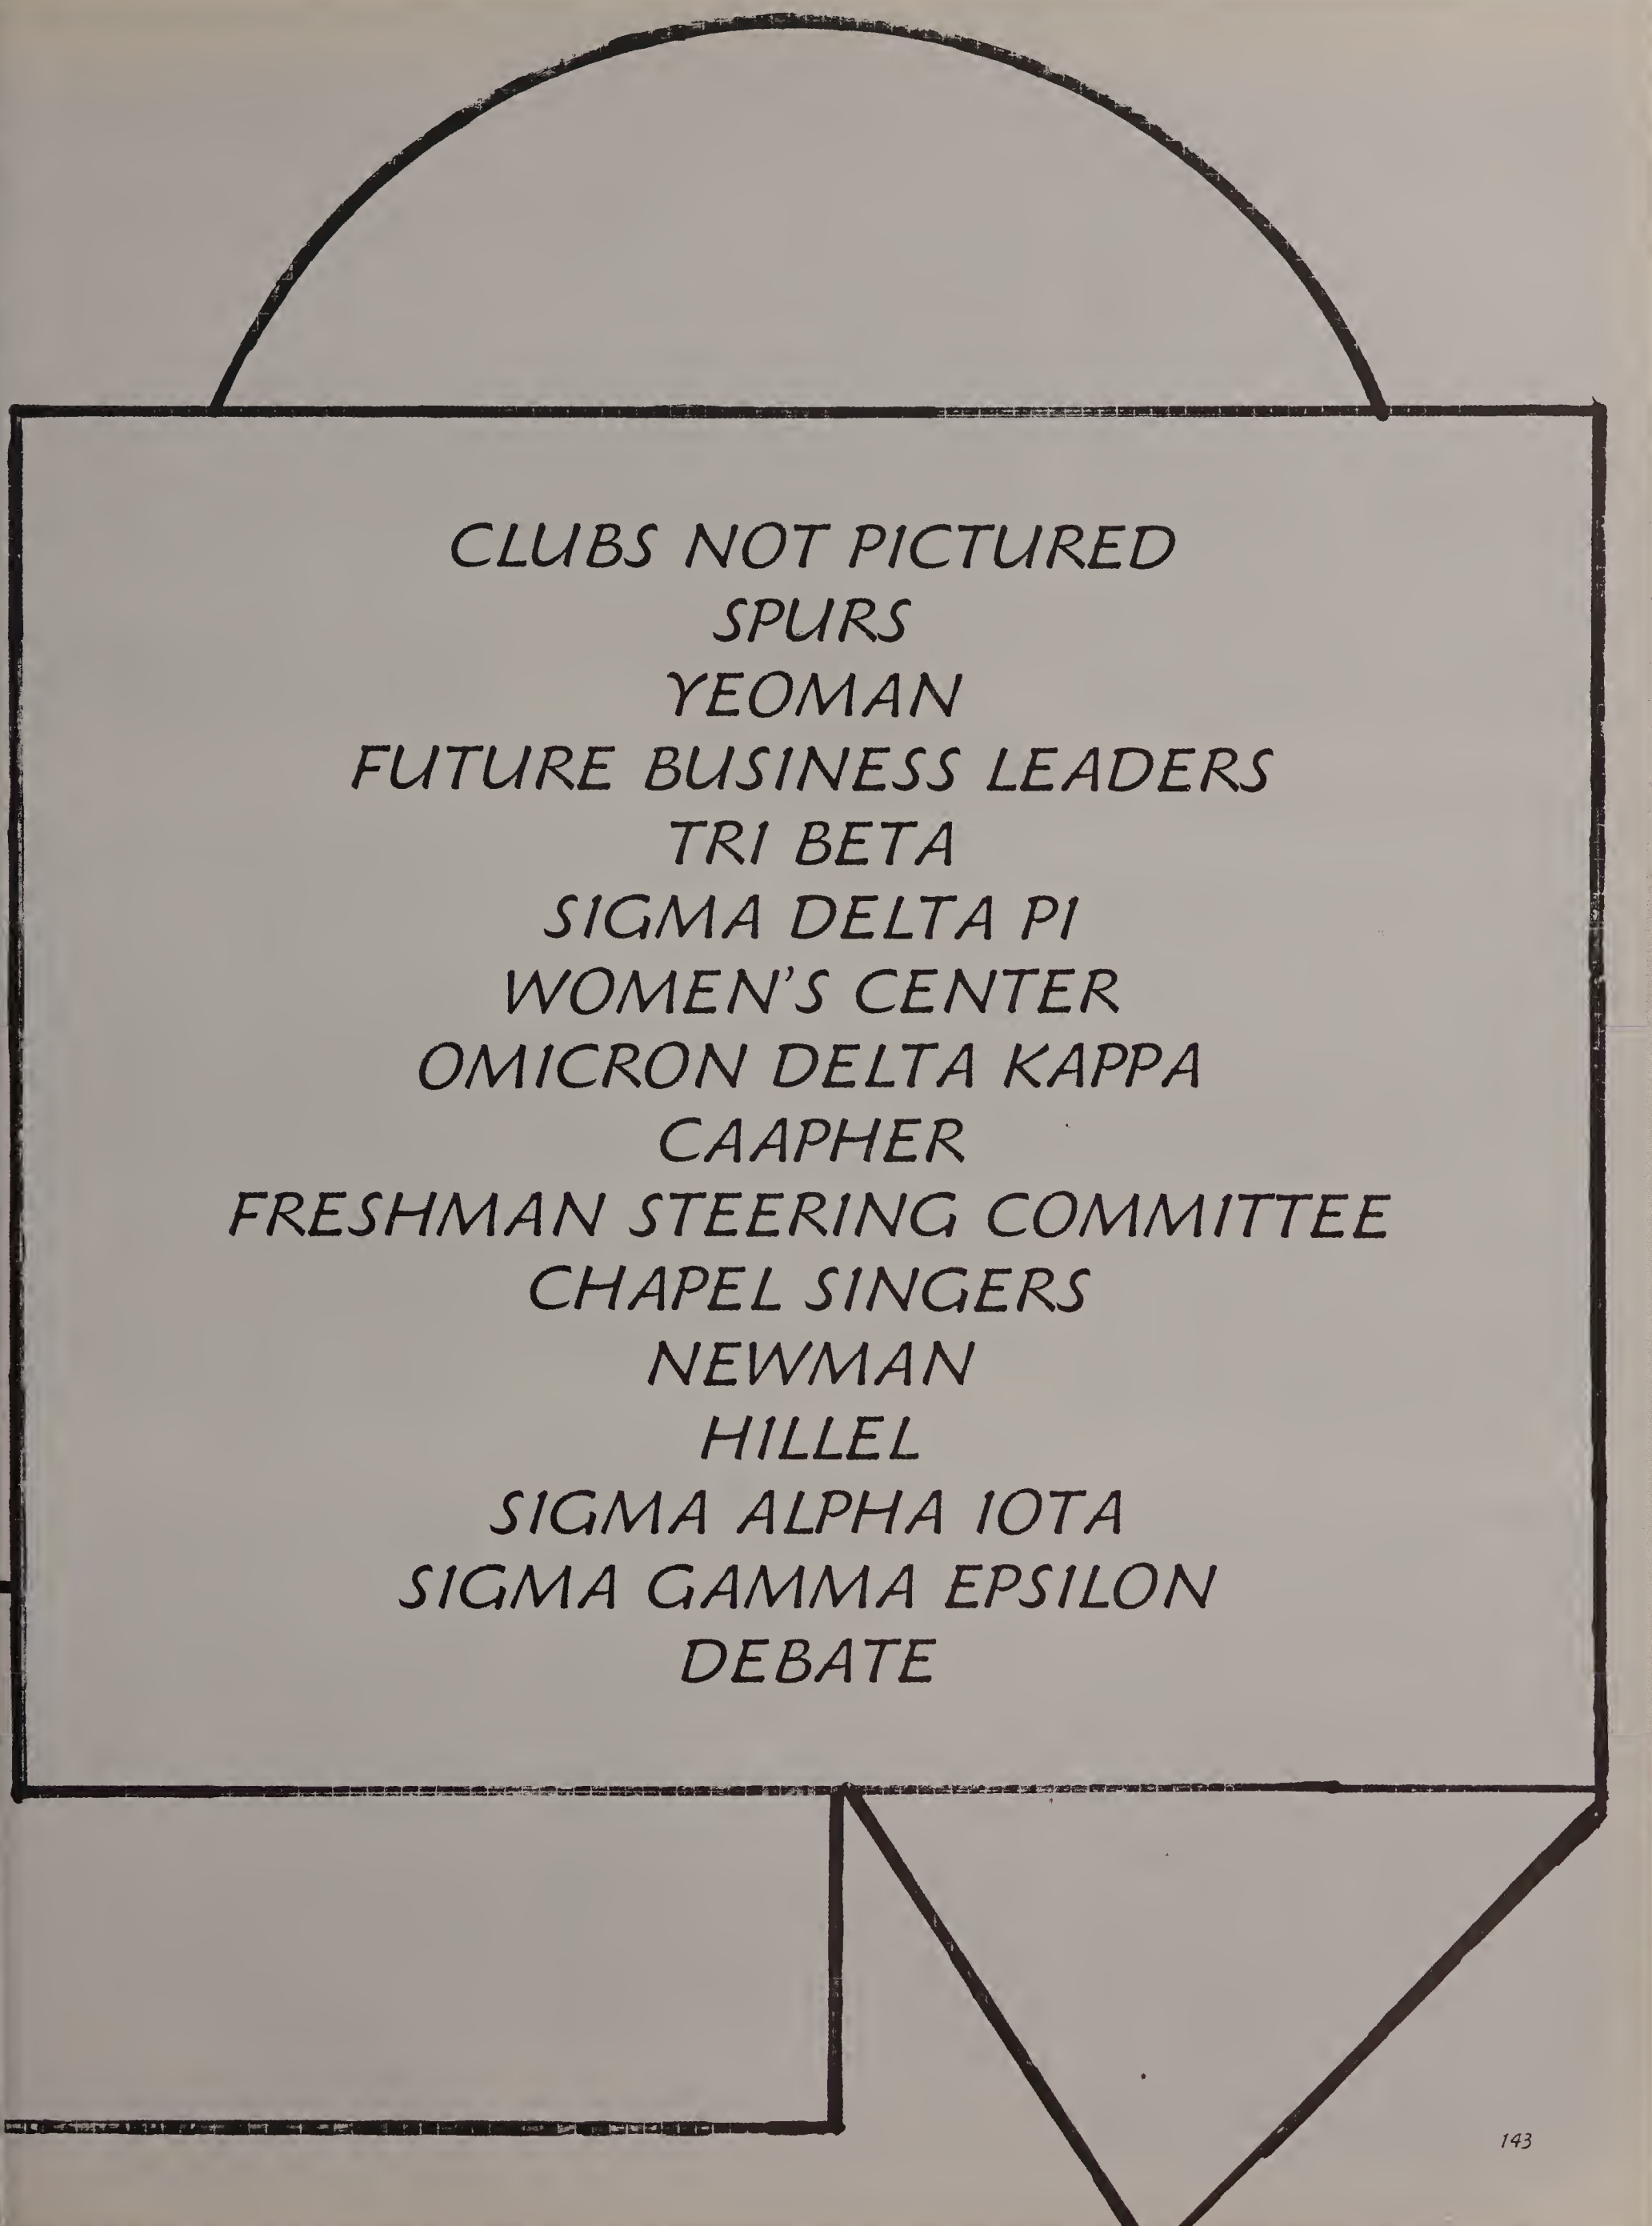

Four thousand dollars of the yearbook budget has already been spent on production costs — to throw this out the window would be ludicrous. Also, Wagner needs senate approval to stop funding the production of the yearbook. It is unlikely that the senate would approve such a move in the unlikely event that Wagner proposed it.

Most of us, the ASUR president most assuredly included, want to see our smiling faces, and those of our friends, peering off those glossy pages. We want and need a yearbook.

Knopp and Caudillo need all students, not just a few concerned ASUR office holders or La Letra staff members, to show their monetary and moral support so that we will not only have a yearbook, but a publication of utmost quality.

At this time I would like to thank everyone who contributed their efforts in the production of La Letra. Aside from all the setbacks in time and the bureaucratic bull we finished on time. Tammy and I made a valiant effort to complete the year-book. Even though it did not turn out exactly as intended, we hope you enjoy the 1984 issue of LA LETRA.

Thank you,

Ken Caudillo

*P.S. Good job

Thank you to all who have supported La Letra. Ken and I are very grateful to the University of Redlands for giving us the opportunity to learn about the school from the inside out. Through all of the battle zones, La Letra has prevailed. The staff, however has had difficulty due to these many obstacles, in presenting the level of excellence we had hoped. We are pleased with the result and hope that you are too. From this year on, La Letra can only improve with your support.

Thank you,
Tammy L. Knopp
